Exhausting version (Fig.1) the hood aspirates the kitchen air saturated with fumes and odours, purifies it through the grease filters and expels it through an outlet pipe. With this version the charcoal filters are not required.

Filtering version (Fig.1A) the hood aspirates the kitchen air saturated with fumes and odours, purifies it through the grease filters and the charcoal filters and returns clean air into the room.

Decide from beginning on the type of installation.

For greater efficiency, we recommend to install the hood in exhausting version.

 Use gloves during installation and maintenance operations.

In case of exhausting version it is important :

- to prepare the hole and the duct of 150 mm.diameter
- to use a duct with the minimal indispensable length
- to use a duct with few curves as possible (max curve angle 90°)
- to avoid to use flat ducts or with different sections
- to use a duct with the smoother surface inside and of a certified material
- don't connect the hood to fumes exhaust ducts (fireplaces, boilers, stoves,...)
- the air can not be evacuated into a wall hole, if this hole is not dedicated to this purpose
- to equip the room of air intakes in order to not create air depression (it must not exceed the 0,04 mbar)

Press the key B if you want that the cooker hood works in exhausting mode (on this way the charcoal filters counter is not working because not considered); the red key H is blinking and you can confirm pressing it.
